Translating Science Into Nursing Education Practice Award

The Translating Science Into Nursing Education Practice Award, a program of the Center for Excellence in Nursing Education (CENE), presented by Sigma in partnership with Chamberlain University, will be presented at the 46th Biennial Convention in 2021 during the CENE pre-conference.

The top scored abstracts in the submission categories that also meet the following criteria will be considered for the award.

- The translation of science addresses a universally applicable and contemporary problem.

- The scope is multi-site, regional, national, or multi-national, and involves a diverse student population.

- How it facilitates changes in education and/or practice is demonstrated.

- There is use of relevant evidence.

- There is a potential impact on one or more of the following: student, faculty, patient, and environmental outcomes.

30 September 2020